Section B : Standards and Ethics Policy

PREAMBLE

The Ethical Guidelines of the Newfoundland and Labrador Kinesiology Association stress the necessity for members applying Kinesiological principles in a professional context to act with integrity, accountability and judgment in the best interest of the client, society and the profession. Implied also is the responsibility to recognize personal limitations in applying a Kinesiological knowledge base.

The Ethical Guidelines are designed to provide guidance but do not offer definitive resolutions to all ethical questions and situations that might arise during the carrying out of professional duties. The guidelines have been formulated on the premise that society and the practice of applying Kinesiological principles are complex and under go continual change and development. Therefore, it is understood that situations posing ethical dilemmas and questions not covered in these guidelines will invariably arise. The Newfoundland and Labrador Kinesiology Association retains the right and responsibility to interpret its Ethical Guidelines and to discipline any member who is found to have violated their provisions or whose conduct is unbecoming to the profession.

RESPONSIBILITY TO THE CLIENT
